Alan E. Curtis, Esq.

White & Jankowski, LLP

Alan Curtis represents municipal, agricultural, industrial, commercial and private water rights holders in a variety of water matters before Colorado courts and state and federal agencies, including issues related to impacts of oil and gas production and hydraulic fracturing or “fracking” on water quantity and quality.

Alan has extensive experience in complex water rights litigation, having negotiated settlements for clients in over a hundred cases before the Colorado water courts. Where settlement is not possible, he has substantial experience as lead trial counsel. Alan has also prosecuted numerous water rights appeals through the Colorado Supreme Court.

In addition, Alan represents clients before the Colorado Ground Water Commission, in rulemaking before the Colorado State Engineer and in administrative proceedings before the Environmental Protection Agency, the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment and other state and federal agencies. He also advises clients in transactions involving the purchase and sale of water rights, including ownership issues, preparation of documents for closing and resolution of disputes.

Alan graduated from the University of Denver College of Law, where he received awards for highest academic performance in water law and energy law. He has lectured and authored articles on various issues regarding Colorado water rights, water rights transactions and issues related to oil and gas production and fracking and its impacts on water quality and quantity.

Christina S. Gunn, Esq.

Hall & Evans, LLC

Ms. Gunn’s practice focuses on defense of employment, discrimination, and federal civil rights matters. Her practice includes claims involving civil rights, constitutional law, correctional healthcare, and employment discrimination. She represents individuals, companies, government agencies, and insurers in administrative matters, state and federal litigation and appeals.

Prior to joining Hall & Evans, Ms. Gunn was an attorney with The Sotos Law Firm in Chicago. There she handled litigation matters dealing with civil rights, police misconduct, and employment discrimination for both public and private sector clients.

She regularly provides consultation, training and presentations for insurers, employers and municipal clients, including recent offerings related to harassment and discrimination in the workplace, employer drug and alcohol testing, and the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act. She has also provided training to police officers, including the Colorado and Illinois Associations of Chiefs of Police, regarding legal updates and other topics such as constitutional standards, use of force, tasers, and OC spray.
